Picking a Way Across a Mountain.

Picking a way is good fun. You must first scout ahead in general. Then you determine more carefully just where each hoof is to fall. For instance, it is a question of whether you are to go above or below a certain ledge. You decide on going below because thus you will dodge a little climb and also a rather slippery looking rock slide. But on investigation you find, hidden by the bushes, a riven boulder. There is no way around it. So then retrace your steps to the place where you made your first choice. The upper route again offers you an alternative. You select one; it turns out well; forks again. But you discover both these forks utterly impracticable. So back you must hike to the very beginning to discover, if you can, perhaps a third and heretofore unconsidered chance. Then, if none are good, you must cast in review the features of all your little explorations in order to determine which best lends itself to expedients. This consumes time, but it is great fun. —Outing Magazine.

Milk Fed Kid.

"This is milk fed kid," said the leather merchant. "It is very soft and fine and pliable, isn't it?"

He smoothed the delicate white skin and went on: "All first rate kid is milk fed. It comes to us from the French mountaineers. These men are superb goatherds. Their immense flocks supply the world's kid gloves. The goatherds of France are careful to keep their kids on an exclusive milk diet. They pen the little animals with their mothers in rocky inclosures, where there is no grass. At that the kids often escape, often manage to eat solid food, for, with almost human perversity, kids that shouldn't be weaned wean themselves early, whereas calves that should be weaned cling like grim death to milk. One meal of grass will spoil a kid's skin, will harden and coarsen and stiffen it; hence, when you buy kid gloves always choose the milk fed kind."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Name Tuxedo.

The Tuxedo coat got its name from the fashionable colony at Tuxedo, and the original name of the place was Duck Cedar. Lots of the old natives still call it Duck Cedar. George Tidabech, one of the original settlers of the country, named the place. The lake was then much smaller than it is now and was simply known as the fish pond. One day old Tidabech and his sons had gone there to shoot game. The ducks were very plentiful; numerous cedar trees were growing out of the rocks along the shore.

"Let us give this place a name," said the old man. "Let us call it Duck Cedar."

So Duck Cedar it was and continued to be for many years until the name was changed to Tuxedo.

Mark Twain on Advertising.

Mark Twain in the midst of a panegyric on advertising told a remarkable story.

"There was a man," he said, "back Iowa way who was so pleased with an advertisement in the local paper that he wrote the following testimonial letter to the editor:

"Mr. Editor: Sir—After selling all I could, giving barrels away, stuffing my hooves till they would eat no more, I still had last fall about 200 tons of one, juicy, fine flavored apples left on my hands. I inserted in your valuable paper an ad. that I was willing to send free a barrel of picked fruit, freight paid in advance by me, to any one who would apply, there being, of course, no charge for the barrel. You will hardly credit it, but that little forty cent ad. cleared out my whole stock of apples, and I could have disposed of five times the quantity on the same terms."

Drinking of Healths.

The drinking of healths in wine or liquor or other kinds originated in Britain at the time of the rule of the Danes, before Alfred the Great finally succeeded in driving them from the land. Owing to the assassination of Englishmen by the Danes, it became a custom to enter into compacts for the mutual preservation of health and security. These compacts were usually pledged in wine, and hence the custom of drinking healths.

A Spelling Test.

The catch question has often been asked, "How many words in the English language end in dous?" The common answer is four—hazardous, jeopardous, tremendous and stupendous. As a matter of fact, however, there are five, and the word often overlooked is hybridous, meaning mongrel or of mixed sort.

Driven From Home.

"Jinx had to put up at the hotel last night. He had quarreled with his cook."

"Why, the idea! What was Mrs. Jinx doing, to stand for a thing like that?"

"Mrs. Jinx is his cook."—Fort Worth Record.

Startled the Doctor.

An Aberdeenshire doctor who recently attended a woman was somewhat staggered at receipt of the following epistle from her: "Please come and vaccinate the child you gave birth to last week."—Caledonian Medical Journal.

A Phenological Point.

We have never yet seen a captain of a varsity crew who possessed a poor or retreating chin, a weak or turned up nose, a small neck or a diminutive brow or irresolute eyes.—Phenological Journal.

No man's abilities are so remarkably shining as not to stand in need of a proper opportunity, a patron and even the praises of a friend to recommend him to the notice of the world.—Pliny.

Tropical Skies.

To northern eyes the intense brilliancy of the tropical and semitropical sky comes as a revelation. Sometimes at noon it is painfully dazzling, but the evening is a vision of prismatic light holding carnival in the air, wherein Milton's "twilight gray" has no part. Unless the sky is held in the relentless grip of a winter storm the orient holds no gray in its evening tones; these are translucent and glowing from the setting of the sun until the stars appear. In Greece we are dreamers in that subtle atmosphere, and in Egypt visionaries under the spell of an ethereal loveliness where the filigree patterning of white dome and minaret and interlacing palm and feathery pepper tree leaves little wonder in the mind that the ornamentation of their architecture is so ravishing in its tracery.—Century.

Aaron Burr in Prison.

Even to his jailer Burr was the grand seigneur whose rights there was none to dispute.

"I hope, sir," ventured that official at their first encounter, "that it would not be disagreeable to you if I should lock this door after dark."

"By no means," graciously returned the prisoner. "I should prefer it to keep out intruders."

"It is our custom, sir," continued the turnkey, "to extinguish all lights at 9 o'clock. I hope, sir, you will have no objection to conform to that."

"That, sir," answered Burr, "I am sorry to say is impossible, for I never go to bed until 12 and always burn two candles."

"Very well, sir—just as you please," agreed the jailer. "I should have been glad if it had been otherwise, but as you please, sir."—Frederick Trevor Hill in Harper's Magazine.

Birds' Spring Wedding Clothes.

There are a number of birds that put on fresh, bright beautiful clothes for their spring weddings. These birds, when they mate, change their sober dress of gray or brown for plumes of gold and scarlet. Thus the warbler bird of Germany puts on for the mating season a ruff of many bright hues, while the female dons a cape of white. The grebe's wedding dress is two tufts of brilliant blue feathers. They stand like horns upon his head. They enhance his beauty greatly. The gnat catcher is a dull brown bird, but in the spring his plumes turn a beautiful green. The fire weaver's wedding dress is the most splendid of all. This bird, a sober fellow in the winter, wears when he takes a wife a dress of bright red.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Honors Easy.

"This silver dollar," began the cashier of the restaurant as he scrutinized the coin—

"Is bad, eh?" interrupted the sour looking patron.

"Well, it doesn't look very good."

"That so? Just bite it, and if it's anything like the dinner I had it'll taste even worse than it looks."—Philadelphia Press.

A Small Boy's Tears.

"What are you crying for, my poor little boy?"

"Boohoo! Pa fell downstairs."

"Don't take on so, my pet. He'll get better soon."

"Sister saw him fall all the way. I never saw nuffin! Boohoo!"—Sporting Times.

A Matter of Taste.

"Can any little boy," asked the new teacher, "tell me the difference between a lake and an ocean?"

"I can," replied Edward, whose wisdom had been learned from experience. "Lakes are much pleasanter to swallow when you fall in."

Dearer.

"George," murmured the young wife, "am I as dear to you as I was before we married?"

"I can't exactly tell," replied the husband absently. "I didn't keep any account of my expenses then."

We must be sure to give due weight to the good-side of every event that has two sides.—Elliot.

Russell Sage Dead.

Russell Sage, the veteran financier, died suddenly of heart disease at his country home "Cedarcroft," at Lawrence, L. I. He had intended to observe his ninetieth birthday on August 4. Mr. Sage has been in exceptionally good health since his arrival at his summer home about six months ago. He was one of the wealthiest men in this country and controlled and loaned more money than any man or corporation.

Too Raley For a Wedding.

In Sutton a generation ago lived a man named Marsh. He decided after due consideration to marry a young lady in an adjoining town. The day was set, preparations were made for the wedding and the guests were assembled. The appointed hour arrived, and the bridegroom did not appear. Another hour of waiting, and still he tarried. The young lady's father became impatient. "I'm going to hunt him up," he said. A half hour's drive brought him to the Marsh home.

"Where is Frank?" he demanded. "He went down cellar to pick over some potatoes, seeing it's so rainy," was the response.

"What do you mean by not coming to the wedding?" demanded the irate prospective father-in-law of the tardy bridegroom.

"It rains so hard I thought you wouldn't have the wedding," Marsh replied, "but I'll fix up and ride back with you, seeing everybody's there."—Boston Herald.

Haeckel Visiting Darwin.

When the carriage drew up before Darwin's house, with its ivy and shadowy elms, the great scientist stepped out of the shade of the creeper covered porch to meet me. He had a tall and venerable appearance, with the broad shoulders of an Atlas that bore a world of thought; a Jove-like forehead as we see in Goethe, with a lofty and broad vault deeply furrowed by the plow of intellectual work. The tender and friendly eyes were overshadowed by the great roof of the prominent brows. The gentle mouth was framed in a long silvery white beard. The noble expression of the whole face, the easy and soft voice, the slow and careful pronunciation, the natural and simple tenor of his conversation, took my heart by storm in the first hour that we talked together, just as his great work had taken my intelligence by storm at the first reading. I seemed to have before me a venerable sage of ancient Greece, a Socrates or an Aristotle.—Described by Haeckel.

A Snake That Swallows Eggs.

The hydraci yeti is a native of South Africa, and, taken all around, he is a curiosity in the reptile line. Unlike the regulation snake, he has no teeth in his mouth, but has a full set of grinders in his stomach. These dental wonders grow from the center of each vertebra. They pass through the walls of the stomach, and are each crowned with enamel. Hydraci is the champion egg sucker, and the teeth in the stomach appear to be nature's provision for breaking the shell of the egg without running the risk of losing the precious contents. When the egg lands in the stomach and the serpent's instinct tells it that everything is all right, the abdominal walls contract, and the egg is crushed against the long row of vertebral teeth.

The Press Association.

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Kentucky Press Association was convened yesterday afternoon at Grayson Springs, Ky., at 3:30 o'clock, by a general reception being held. The reception was followed by a dance last night. This morning at 9 o'clock the regular order of business will begin.
